Dear Parents

I am writing to you about an exciting new resource that we have available in the Mathematics department. This programme, HegartyMaths, will be used for many homework tasks and to aid all students with revision for topic tests, mid-point exams, preparatory examinations and final GCSE papers. The resource features useful revision videos and many exercises which will clearly and instantly assess understanding of various topics. There are over 600 different activities that can be accessed through the website.

HegartyMaths can be found at the following web address:

<https://hegartymaths.com>

In order to login your child will need to click on existing users and follow the instructions given, including filling in the name of our school and their names and birthday. They will then have the opportunity to create a password for their account. This should be recorded in an appropriate place.

HegartyMaths will be explained and demonstrated to students during lessons and many students will find specific tasks being set by teachers for them to complete, both in class and at home.

HegartyMaths works on PCs and Macs and will also work on a variety of other devices including iPads and Smartphones. It does require access to the internet and then works through the device's web browser. If a lack of internet connectivity causes a problem to your child, then in the first instance they should talk to their Mathematics teacher who will make alternative provision.

Could you put a note in your child's logbook acknowledging receipt of this letter.

Yours sincerely

Tom Mawson
